Debunking the Liberal Lies About Abortion

Where would we be without the contributions of Lazaro Spallanzani, Jacques and Pierre Curie, Paul Langevin, SY Sokolov, Donald Sproule, Floyd Firestone, Karl and Friederick Dussik, George Ludwig, Ian Donald, and Philip Green? These men - and countless other anonymous and obscure doctors, researchers, scientists, and physicists - developed and refined what we know today as the modern ultrasound.

This medical and scientific breakthrough has allowed doctors to peer inside the human body to diagnose previously unknown illnesses and to perform previously impossible operations. And yes, to detect an embryo's beating heart as early as 18 days after conception.

That simple discovery has singlehandedly debunked and permanently discredited the liberal lie that a preborn child is just a blob of inanimate tissue that can be removed and discarded as mere medical waste. The truth of the matter is that abortion stops a beating heart... and under 18 U.S. Code § 1111, which defines murder as "the unlawful killing of a human being with malice aforethought", a rationale

The Self-Delusion of the Democrat Party

I hope they have the ghost of Sigmund Freud on speed-dial, because Dr. Phil is a Trump fan and Joyce Brothers died in 2012 and isn't taking any calls.

Who could possibly be in such desperate need of psychological help? Try Chuck Schumer, Hakeem Jeffries, and virtually every other Democrat officeholder on Capitol Hill.

Recently, Jeffries, the House minority leader, recorded an embarrassing and delusional video in which he resembled a hostage being forced by his captors to read from a self-incriminating script. Staring straight ahead like the proverbial deer caught in the headlights, Jeffries made a series of outlandish claims that made viewers wonder if he was tripping out on Quaaludes.

"We have the Republicans on the run on three core issues", Jeffries began, perhaps forgetting that the GOP just won the White House, Senate, and House trifecta in November. He also seemed oblivious to the findings of a recent Quinnipiac approval rating poll that showed Democrats in Congress lagging behind Republicans, 40%-21%.

Undaunted by actual facts, Jeffries asserted that "They are on the run in terms of the economy. In fact, Donald Trump and Republicans are crashing the economy in real time."

No sooner had Jeffries made his false claims, but the Labor Department released its economic report for February, President Trump's first full month in office, and it showed that inflation was lower than expected. CNBC reported that "on an annual basis, headline inflation was at 2.8%, while core was at 3.1%. Both also were 0.1 percentage point below the Wall Street consensus and the previous month's levels."

You talk about bad timing, Hakeem!

Jeffries' second false narrative was that "We have them on the run in terms of health care - particularly as it relates to Medicaid. House Democrats stand on the side of Medicaid and the American people. Republicans are trying to enact the largest cut to Medicaid in American history, and we need to keep the pressure on them legislatively and in communities all across the country."

Sorry, Hakeem, but a recent Harvard CAPS / Harris poll showed that the American public supports President Trump, Elon Musk, D.O.G.E., and their cost-cutting measures by a whopping 76%-24% super majority. OUCH!

As for Jeffries' third point, it was about as desperate as a Hail Mary pass at the end of a football game that your team is losing by 30 points. "And we have them on the run with respect to the GOP tax scam," Jef-person must logically conclude that abortion qualifies as premeditated murder.

Another liberal lie that deserves to be debunked because it is so debased is the one that goes like this: "It is better to abort a baby than to subject it to a life of potential poverty, pain, and lack of privilege."

Following such ludicrous reasoning, the world would have been robbed of Mahatma Gandhi, Abraham Lincoln, and Nelson Mandela, all of whom grew up in adjacent poverty. And can you imagine the incomparable voice of Andrea Bocelli being silenced simply because he was born partially blind due to congenital glaucoma?

More than 50 million Americans, roughly 15% of our country's population, have some type of physical or mental disability and many of them were born that way. Do abortion-on-demand advocates really believe that these people should be "spared" a life filled with challenges to overcome?

And since poverty is more prevalent amongst children of color - 25.9% for American Indian children, 19.5% for Hispanic children, and 17.8% for Black children - how is suggesting that abortion is an easy solution not considered racist?

Finally, liberals love to accuse conservatives of being pro-life before birth but disinterested and disconnected afterwards. That's why they support killing 1,000,000 preborn babies each year but then lavish expensive social service programs on the ones that slip through the abortionist's fingers.

As the old saying goes, figures don't lie... but liars figure. Study after study comes to the same conclusion: conservatives give more generously to charities than do liberals. Even the far-left leaning New York Times had to admit in a 2018 article that, "Republican-dominated counties have the highest rates of donations to charity."

In other words, liberals are generous with Uncle Sam's checkbook, but not with their own.

One last Progressive fallacy that must be laid to rest...

There are approximately 1 million preborn babies aborted in the United States each and every year. Meanwhile, there are an estimated 2 million loving and financially capable couples waiting to adopt a newborn child. That means that if every aborted child had been carried to term, delivered, and given up for adoption instead of being murdered in its mother's womb, there would still be 1 million couples waiting to adopt a newborn baby.

Let that sink in, liberals.

How to Commit Political Suicide by Chuck Schumer and the Democrat Party

The early returns are in... and Chuckie Schumer can't be very happy.

In a Quinnipiac University poll released last month, only 21% of voters said that they approved of the job that the Democrats in Congress are doing whereas 40% gave the Republicans in Congress two thumbs up. Now, I realize that a 40% approval rating is nothing to brag about under normal circumstances, but it represents an all-time high for the GOP. Conversely, the 21% figure represents an all-time low for Schumer, Hakeem Jeffries, and the rest of the Democrats on Capitol Hill.

So, what has caused such a monumental shift in the way Americans perceive the two parties? Well, Donald Trump has a lot to do with it.

Even people who don't like the man personally are giving President Trump high marks for the energy and toughness he has exhibited since taking the oath of office just two months ago. Of course, compared to "Geritol Joe" Biden, the wax figures in Disney's Hall of Presidents seem more lifelike.

But there's more. Americans are amazed to see a politician actually keeping his campaign promises, one after another. Most don't, but Donald J. Trump does... and voters find that extremely refreshing.

The flurry of executive orders that President Trump has signed since taking office has kept the Democrats - and America's enemies - on their heels, which has made for great political theater. In short order, Mr. Trump has faced down Canada, Mexico, Columbia, Venezuela, and Panama as he fries said, before trotting out a laundry list of unfounded accusations. “They want to cut Medicaid, cut nutritional assistance for children and families, cut veterans’ benefits, and potentially cut Social Security benefits by trying to decimate the Social Security Administration.”

Silly boy. Everyone knows that a rising tide lifts all boats and so, an across-the-board tax cut will benefit Mr. and Mrs. Middle Class American. Call that a “tax scam” if you want, but when voters get a hefty refund check in the mail, who do you think they will believe? As for cutting benefits to veterans and seniors, those scare tactics don’t work anymore... and shame on you for trying. The truth of the matter is that by reducing the number of career bureaucrats at the Veterans Administration and the Social Security Administration, there will be more money available for actual beneficiaries, not less.

Not to be outdone by his co-conspirator in the other chamber, Senate minority leader Chuck Schumer held a rally outside the Treasury building recently that was attended by fewer people than a Miami Marlins game in mid-July. Standing beside him was 86-year-old Rep. Maxine Waters and Rep. Al Green, shaking his infamous cane, as well as some other nondescript Democrat lackies. Not exactly the face of the future of the Democrat Party (or is it?)

Dressed in a bulky parka and tie, Schumer led the dozen or so people in an awkward chant of “We will win” and “We won’t rest.” Here is how it went over, according to former Rep. Tim Ryan (D-OH), who watched in horror...

“I just don’t even know what to say anymore when I see this kind of stuff. Is it Saturday Night Live or real life?” Ryan wrote on X. “Does anyone really think this is the future of the country? This is the only alternative to Trump’s America? It’s just so depressing.”

And yet, the worst was yet to come. Lacking a winning message - or any coherent message for that matter - Democrat lawmakers have apparently decided that launching a social media blitz is the key to regaining the majority in Congress. W-R-O-N-G!

One after another, congresswomen taped themselves throwing punches in a series of amateurish videos that made Jeffries’ low-budget home movie look like a Cecil B. DeMille production by comparison. Even worse were the painfully over-scripted clips of more than 20 leading Democrats aping the same critical monologue about President Trump. The internet absolutely exploded with negative comments mocking Elizabeth Warren, Cory Booker, Tim Kaine, and company for looking and sounding like a bunch of clueless clones.

“This is what coordinated propaganda looks like”... “The absolute definition of an echo chamber”... “They have nothing left to stop Trump”... “These democrats are losing more and more ground, popularity, and relevance”... “It’s embarrassing to watch these so-called civil servants acting like spoiled five year olds”... “This is what happens when your whole political strategy is “yeah, but Trump”... “They are so lame that they need a script and don’t think people notice they are ALL saying the same thing”... “The Democrats have done this for as long as I can remember. Remember, in that party, one is not allowed to think for oneself”... “Why do they think we are dumb?”... “Well folks that’s what you get when you cut government spending, they are down to one writer”... “The party of joy and unity is the most divisive group of people I’ve ever seen in my life!!!”

But Chuckie Schumer would still tell you not to believe your own lying eyes, because despite his party’s tanking poll numbers, he is still claiming that a Democrat victory is on the horizon.

Actually, Chuck, that’s what we call a mirage... so lay back down on the couch, pop another Xanax, and tell the doctor why you hate your mother.

makes his way across North and South America. He has already set his sights on the situations in Gaza and Ukraine, and has Russia, China, North Korea, and Iran in his peripheral vision.

If the first 60 days of Trump 2.0 are any indication, this should be a whirlwind four years... so you'd better buckle up!

Another factor that has voters swinging in the GOP's direction has to do with Elon Musk and D.O.G.E. Nobody likes being taken for a sucker - whether it's by a Ponzi schemer or a used car salesman - and now they are finding out that our federal government is a little bit of both. Make that a lot of both, because the wasteful and reckless spending that Elon and company have uncovered is making Americans madder than a hornet's nest.

And therein lies the rub. While 70% of Americans are cheering on the bespectacled nerds at D.O.G.E., Chuck Schumer is rallying (paid?) crowds on the Capitol steps to defend USAID and the other government agencies that have flushed taxpayers' dollars down foreign toilets for decades.

Memo to Chuck: defending the indefensible isn't the best way to reclaim the majority in the House and the Senate or to win the White House in 2028. In fact, I can't think of a better way to further alienate the American people than to act like you don't care about how their hard-earned tax dollars are spent.

Proverbs 16:18 reads, "Pride goes before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall." Maybe Chuck, Hakeem, and the rest of the Democrats in Congress should crack open the Good Book before it's too late and they go the way of the Whigs, the Dixiecrats, and the Know Nothing Party.
